BANQUET A GRAND SUCCESS

A Large Attendance, Interesting Program, Splendid Supper and Good Feeling Prevailed Throughout.

If the departed are in any way cognizant to the transactions of this mad-dance sphere, then the venerable shade of good St. Patrick must have looked down with a benign eye on the large number of people, proud of being "exiles" and his children, who graced the festive board in Central Hall last night and made the night glorious with that ease which is inherent in the true Celt. Versatile to a degree, no race shows as many different phases of character as the Irish, yet over all stands out that happy, carefree nature mixed with keen perceptive faculties that in years of darkest trial has bridged many a dark gulf which would have disheartened a less sanguine, a less loyal or a free race. That the descendants of the race do not lack in any particular the trait that made Ireland the "Land of Saints and Martyrs" is patent to all who know the sons and daughters of Patrick and Bridget.

The Catholic church has ever been blessed with the brightest Irishmen among the clergy, but there have been few better than the Rev. Father McQueen, the energetic pastor of Smith's Creek, and a simple statement of the fact that he was there speaks plainly for the high quality of the platform exercises. Thrice has Father Frank McQueen appeared as toastmaster in Yale and each year increases his popularity. The round on round of applause that greeted this young priest's appearance made the hall quake.

Another Irishman and one prominent in secular affairs in Michigan was Hon. Patrick H. Kelley, who responded to the toast "Our State," a theme this gentleman could and did do justice to. Born in Michigan and now and for years intimately identified with its political history, Mr. Kelley gave one of the finest impromptu addresses ever delivered from a Yale platform and although many were Irish that thronged the hall they nevertheless appreciated the words of the speaker, by loud applause, showing that first they were American citizens and second "exiles" imbued with a love of Fatherland, meliorated, deepened and sweetened by past trials, and love for their adopted land. Mr. Kelley is a pleasing talker, whose address did much to make the banquet a success.

Another pleasing number was the vocal solo by Miss M. Fitzgerald, well-known and talented musician of this city, whose ability in the musical line is second to none, and the applause she received was a well deserved tribute to a gifted daughter of the parish.

The toast "Our City" was handled by Mayor Beavis, who in graceful language portrayed the beauties of Yale and the hospitality of its people and extended the keys of the city to Father Cullinane and the representative body of Irishmen before him, it being indeed a pleasure to welcome such men to the city, and in behalf of this corporation he trusted that they would often have the pleasure of throwing open the civic doors to the Irish, especially on the natal day of their apostle of peace, the great St. Patrick.

No celebration of St. Patrick's Day would be complete without the toast "The Day We Celebrate," and this year the time-honored theme was handled by Rev. Father Dunnigan, of Lapeer, who in the course of his address made the Irish proud of the fact that the blood of Erin circulates in their veins; and to those not born of the parent stock he held out the palm leaf of imitation of the example set by the Celtic race, since days of the noble and holy Patrick. He reviewed extensively the annals of the days when Patrick and his few followers in sight of the hills of Tara kindled fire, in defiance of pagan gods, and his complete conversion of nearly the entire island in a few years. He said the history of the Emerald Isle during this time is one of the wonders of the world even to this day. The faith kindled, he said, amid the groves of Tara on that memorable day has never been extinguished, but has constantly increased with a dazzling glow; and when through perilsous legislation at home, the Irish were forced to fly to more friendly shores, not merely a smothering ember of faith was brought with them, but a flaming brand was held on high, illuminating the New World.

The musical program was excellent, embracing outside and local talent. Vocal solos were sung by Bert Evans, Bert Wellman, Edward Brisley, Leo Varley and Mart Ryan, of Port Huron, which were very pleasing to the audience. The specialty "Peters and Bernard" by Leo Witliff and B. J. Martin called forth applause from those present. St. Stephen's Orchestra of Port Huron furnished excellent music during the evening. They were assisted by May Fitzgerald and Chas. E. Wells of our city.

The Irish are noted for wit and last night the auditors were treated to one continued flow of clean humor from the beginning to the time Father Mc-

YALE

YALE—not the county seat—25 miles northwest of Port Huron, and 96 miles southeast of Saginaw, is located on the Saginaw division of the Pere Marquette railroad. It has 100 business places, two banks, Yale State and First National; two newspapers; three hotels; seven churches; a $35,000 brick school building, unexcelled by any other in a city of this size for its modern conveniences; electric light and water works systems; all current sidewalks, not a foot of board walk. Mail is received here four times a day; seven rural routes start from here. Has a woolen mill, grist mill, flax mill, canning factory, creamery, two elevators, foundry, machine shop three blacksmith shops.

Lying in the most fertile section of the state Yale excels all other places as a market for wool, hay, grain and farm products.

Population of Yale is 1500; St. Clair county 55,000. In other words Yale is 1/37. A most desirable location for factories.

Queen called on the beloved pastor of the Sacred Heart parish at the end of the program. Father Cullinane in a few heartfelt words cordially thanked all for their attendance, and the speaker of the hour in making the third banquet the best ever.

With the ending of the banquet, we congratulate the esteemed pastor, Fr. Cullinane, on the success that has crowned his efforts and those of his people, in making St. Patrick's Day one to look forward to, or back upon, while the Irish may have many bitter memories as they review the history of their native heath, there is one epoch that can only fill them with joy—the history of that immortal saint and priest, scholar and statesman, St. Patrick, whose name will ever be held in reverence as long as an Irishman is left on earth.

PRESENT-DAY MORMONISM.

At the Pres. Church, Monday evening Mrs. Diefenderfer of Erie, Penna., lecturing in the cause of Home Missions, gave an able address on "Present-day Mormonism." Mrs. Diefenderfer is well posted on her subject and kept a large audience much interested for one hour and twenty minutes. The three points made were well proven.

First that Mormonism and morality cannot exist together; second, Mormonism and Christianity cannot exist together; third, Mormonism and the U. S. Government cannot exist together. Mrs. Diefenderfer's family were neighbors of the founder of mormonism, Joseph Smith, and for this reason was able to give an interesting and correct history of their early days.

Her description of the life they lead, and the evils as she saw them in her travels and work among them was vivid and impressive, bringing the nefarious practices before her audience in a way that will not be soon forgotten.

Mrs. Diefenderfer was actively engaged in the attempt to unseat Smoot and gave us a good account of the effort made at Washington. She did not hesitate to condemn those who refused to do their duty to their country in this case, and while she was not abusive she spoke very plainly of the action of some of our best men there, among them Taft, Knox, of Pennsylvania, and even Roosevelt came in for his share of criticism. The claim made by the speaker was that these people were making every effort to hold the Mormon vote.

On the whole the lecture was good, and brought the audience the fact that there is a great danger to the country from this "nefarious system" and that it is necessary for us to be on our guard against it.
